

THE INFINITE LOOP

Lean management is put into practice in a fun, fast paced VR team building activity.

How it works

A team of white hackers is called to a special secret mission. The night before, a young man bought a virtual reality headset from a suspicious company named "The Odyssey". While trying out the new headset, he was suddenly absorbed into the virtual world. The team's mission is to go back and forth between the virtual, and real worlds finding clues to release the teenager, and help him return to the real world. One team member at a time wears the VR headset to describe the virtual world, while the teammates in the real world decipher and communicate solutions. Can they help him escape?

Learning outcomes

The Infinite Loop is a powerful lean management business game, based on real-time collaboration, and communication. The more precise the player in the virtual world is in describing the problem, the faster the teammates in the real world find the solution. Interactive learning, combined with continuous feedback, and improvement, makes the teams solve problems in more efficient ways. The Infinite Loop is a versatile, and powerful tool for debriefing on complex issues affecting modern businesses working with remote teams, employing agile methodologies.
